Star Spangled Baby Ltd was formed during the spring of 2003 with the concept that young children should learn about American Patriotism, and our flag. Their first Children's book was written to help parents to teach their children our National Anthem.

This first book in a series consists of eight pages, showing patriotic photos of flag carrying children along with the words of our National Anthem. The Reciting and signing of the words of our anthem at even the youngest age proves to be remarkably easy for these growing minds.

The goals of this company started with their personal experience on the tragic day of September 11th. Founder Tina Grell's husband called "the Pentagon" as his duty station on that day. That day will always be difficult reminder; but as Tina has said " It is vital for us as Americans to work together to build good strong and free communities and the very young should learn about our country."

Educational toys are vital to good learning. This has been very successful for many years. We grew up with educational toys and appreciate their value. Our concept to teach American patriotism to young children through toys is not at all unique. We have not disgraced our flag in any way with our new book. We hope that by showing our flag in a children's book, youngsters will grow to understand it's meaning. The flag itself, with a stick for a flagpole would not make a good toy. Showing this patriotic icon in the context of learning our National Anthem seems quite natural.

Before today, young children would begin Kindergarten or First Grade and not know what our American Flag stands for. Through learning about our flag and our country's vital symbols at a very young age, children will grow to love and respect our flag as a cornerstone of their personality.

We often think of the famous Time-Life photo of John F. Kennedy Jr. saluting the flag that was draped over our President's coffin. The same patriotic feeling is felt whenever you see young children paying proper respect. Our photo collection can inspire young and old.

Please join us in our crusade to teach this value to our children.
